

Reflection on Psalm 75

God does nothing halfway.

Look at creation.

Everything is done with
care,
order, and
incredible detail,

whether it's the farthest mysteries of space or the tiniest one-celled creature.

Whether you search through a telescope or

a microscope,

the closer you look,

the more wonders you find.

Examine closely enough

even the finest human handiwork, and you'll find rough edges.

God leaves no rough edges.

I look at the way He deals with me, and I see the same meticulous attention to detail.

When I was far away,

when I didn't know or

care about Him,

He patiently drew me to Himself, despite my ignorance and

self-centeredness.

Down to today,

He never abandons me to my own weakness.

Never!

He relentlessly chases down every little thing that separates me from His perfect, loving, generous will.

He patiently breathes Himself into every aspect of my life and every corner of my being.

Be assured that

at the right time,

He will do the same with our broken,
lost,
unjust world.

He has promised to return and put everything
exactly as it should be.

He will finish all that He has started, perfectly and
completely,
with no rough edges.

All creation,
all reality
will reflect Him
in every detail.

God does nothing halfway.
He patiently,
carefully,
faithfully
makes everything
right.
